More Than a Constructive Hobby: The Paintings of Frank Freed

William A. Camfield

Frank Freed (1906–75) painted vignettes of day-by-day life, ideas, and feelings in relative obscurity for almost thirty years in a method mostly classified as "naive" or "folk" art. greater than a confident pastime surveys the Houston businessman/artist's paintings and indicates the way it used to be proficient through refined observations and an severe love of literature. Freed was once born in San Antonio in 1906, the single baby of German-origin Jews, yet spent such a lot of his lifestyles in Houston. After international struggle II, he took good thing about the GI invoice to sign up for a uncomplicated portray class. even if he created paintings for his personal excitement in Houston, some distance faraway from the nation's northeastern cultural center, Freed's most sensible paintings fused honorable traditions, combining the cultural observation of such artists as Honoré Daumier and Ben Shahn with More Than a Constructive Hobby: The Paintings of Frank Freed the fashion of "naive" or "folk" artwork set by means of the Douanier Rousseau, Horace Pippin, and John Kane. With the overpowering artwork power established in New York, Houston artists like Freed bought little attention. Compiled to accompany a 1996 exhibition of his paintings More Than a Constructive Hobby: The Paintings of Frank Freed by means of the Museum of excellent Arts, Houston, greater than a positive More Than a Constructive Hobby: The Paintings of Frank Freed pastime redresses that neglect. Freed's mild humanism imbues his compositions; he recorded the social mores of his times, utilizing his acquaintances and native atmosphere to reflect the bigger problems with his day. at the infrequent events that he addressed higher old events, equivalent to the horrors of Auschwitz or the strife of the civil rights movement, he did so in human terms, trying to the person to specific the whole.
